Bay, Waveland deadlocked on wastewater district rules

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

The Cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland are deadlocked regarding the former city's proposed agreement to join the Waveland Regional Wastewater District.

Although the District Board of Directors, Wednesday night, rescinded an earlier decision to reject the Bay agreement and took the matter under advisement, discussion at a Wednesday night Waveland Board of Aldermen's meeting indicates the city officials are not yet willing to concede to the neighboring city leader's major demands.

The wastewater board also accepted a recommendation of Waveland City

Attorney and Judge Lucien Gex to notify the State Department of Natural Resources that the district would need more time to work out an agreement acceptable to all parties.

A federal and state order calls for all Hancock and Harrison entities to affiliate with a countywide wastewater district before Aug. 1.

The Waveland aldermen and Hancock County Board of Supervisors both have agreed in essentially identical documents to join the district, but the Bay Council requested several changes in the agreement which would require legislative action to restructure the operational rules of the district.

The board consists of Mayors Larry

Bennett of Bay St. Louis and John Longo of Waveland, and A.A. (Dolph) Keller, supervisor board president.

Bay and Waveland city officials attended the Wednesday night meeting in an attempt to resolve differences.

Longo primarily voiced objections to the Bay proposals, but also said some areas of disagreement might be resolved.

However, at the Waveland board meeting which immediately followed the wastewater session at City Hall, Longo stated, "Based upon the contingencies I don't see how we can accept the Bay's agreement."

Annexed area citizens request all Bay revenue sharing funds

By BRENT MACEY

Members of Annexed Citizens of Bay St. Louis are requesting $100,555 in revenue sharing money be spent entirely on providing drainage, water, sewer and paved streets in their area.

The request was presented by Charles Hirshtus, area representative for the committee, at a recent revenue sharing hearing in City Hall.

The hearing was designed to receive public input on where the federal money should be spent.

Others who attended the meeting to offer suggestions and request money for specific programs included Geraldine Lang, from the Concerned Citizens, and Eva McDonald, director of the Bay St. Louis Senior Citizen Center.

A petition read by Hirshtus states, "The Annexed Citizens Committee of Bay St. Louis feels it is absurd for the City of Bay St. Louis to consider anything other than use of the Revenue Sharing funds in the annexed area."

"Anything less would be taken as another flagrant indication that the city's elected officials are continuing to neglect their responsibility to the annexed area."

The citizens are requesting:

—That drainage from Spanish Acres Subdivision be corrected through the addition of pumping stations, enlargement of existing culverts and addition of new culverts.

—That an engineering firm finalize drawings so that competitive bids from contractors can be obtained on the cost of installing drainage, water, sewer, paved streets and gas in the annexed area.

—That these services be installed to the point where all revenue-sharing funds are exhausted.

A final note in the petition requests the city obtain the remaining funds necessary to complete the installation of these services, as ordered by the Chancery Court in the annexation proceedings.

In 14-15-year-old league

Harrison-Hancock team wins state championship

By ELLIS CUEVAS

The Harrison-Hancock 14-15 year-old Babe Ruth All-Stars won the state championship Saturday in Ocean Springs.

The local team defeated Pascagoula 8-4 Friday night then came back Saturday with a 4-2 victory after being defeated by St. Martin last Sunday in the first game 4-2.

The team's first win was a 15-0 victory over Natchez, followed by a 2-1 victory over Hattiesburg on Tuesday.

The game on Wednesday was a come from behind 6-5 victory over Ocean Springs after going into the bottom of the seventh inning trailing by one run.

The Harrison-Hancock team coached by Dale Moran, and Rickey Ladner, manager, on Thursday defeated Stone County 9-4.

Regional play will be at Childersburg, Ala. starting Monday against the Arkansas champions.

Members of the team are, Scott Farve, Kendall Necaise, Rodney Ladner, Matt Ladner; Ron Ladner, Rickey Mauffray, Michael Hendricks, Milton Lewis, Brian Bratton, Kenny Beech, and Desmond Hoda.

Moran said, "The state championship was a team effort, especially after losing the first game in the double elimination tournament. We had had to play seven nights in a row, racking up six consecutive victories for the title."

"It would be hard to single out an individual player as a star, it was just a great team effort," Moran added.

Moran appreciated the fine following during the state championships, as many supporters went to every game.

The coach said it is estimated at least $1,000 is needed to take the boys from North Hancock and West Harrison County to the regionals.

He asks anyone interested in making a contribution to contact M.J. Necaise in Kiln at 255-7624.

The team is scheduled to leave at 9 a.m. this morning for the regional championships.

The Bay St. Louis Babe Ruth Little League 13-year-old All-Stars also captured the state championship in their division last Tuesday.

Burglaries reported in Cedar Point

By BRENT MACEY

The Bay St. Louis Police Department warned citizens Friday to be on the look out for any suspicious people following a rash of burglaries in the Cedar Point area of the city this week.

Thursday, the home of Gary Heitzman on 618 Esplanade was ransacked some time between 12:30 p.m. and 4 p.m.

Robbers forced the door to the home open and stole merchandise estimated at $2,800, according to a police report.

Also Thursday, the home of Rev. Ernest Culley of 608 Athletic Drive was ransacked between 10 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Police have yet to determine the value of merchandise taken.

Also Thursday, St. Rose School at 300 Necaise Street was broken into and valuables estimated at $200-$250 were taken.

On July 16, the residence of H.I. Beck of 201 Corinth Drive was broken into and ransacked between 5 p.m. and 7 p.m.

Approximately $800 of merchandise was taken.

Auxiliary Police Chief Brenda Anderson stated all the burglaries involved forced entry through the doorway. Articles in the houses were scattered by robbers in their search for valuables.

To meet new state criteria

Restructuring of county school instruction eyed

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

Schools of the Hancock County School District will be restructured this coming school year to meet new State Institution of Higher Learning instruction standards.

The new education criteria will affect this year's incoming freshmen.

Billy Sills, county district superintendent of education, at a Saturday morning School Board meeting revealed the present elementary, junior high and high school system will be changed this fall to a elementary, middle and high school structure.

The impending change was prompted by a letter the superintendent recently received from E.E. Thrash, executive secretary and director of the state institution, which states all Mississippi public schools will be required to offer four years instruction in English, two in mathematics, 2.5 in social studies and one in an elective.

Sills said the upgraded education requirements are minimum state public university criteria for students graduating in 1986—students beginning the ninth grade this year.

Thrash states in the letter, "It is also recommended that students pursue two units of foreign languages, take a mathematics course during their senior year, take a computer science course and gain a level of typing proficiency."

Sills reported the state previously required three years of English instruction and two years each of mathematics and sciences.

Thrash reports the institution's Board of Trustees voted to upgrade admission standards on July 15.

Sills said the state previously required three English courses, two years each of mathematics and science instruction, and same amount of social science and elective courses.

Institutions requiring the new standards include Alcorn, Delta, Jackson, Mississippi and Mississippi Valley

Powerline opponents to appeal PSC ruling

By BRENT MACEY

Opponents of a 500,000 volt line planned for construction across southern Mississippi are planning to appeal a decision by the Mississippi Public Service Commission which will allow construction to begin.

The commission voted 2-1 last week in favor of the line which will connect the Daniel Electric Generating Plant in Pascagoula with Gulf States Utilities of Beaumont, Texas.

Mississippi Power, which will build the line, plans to sell coal generated electricity from the Daniel's plant to Texas until 1994.

Tom Tyner, a Gulfport attorney representing Southern Mississippi Residents for Orderly Development—a group opposed to construction of the line, stated he would be filing an appeal soon with the Florida County Chancery Court concerning the PSC's ruling.

According to Tyner, the appeal will be based on several motions filed by SMROD that were overruled by the PSC before the public hearing.

One motion filed by Tyner argued the line is interstate in nature and not intrastate since it would cross the Mississippi-Louisiana border and would allow power to be transmitted from Alabama to Texas.

Tyner claims a 1981 Mississippi

Supreme Court decision ruled the PSC has no jurisdiction over an interstate line.

He will also argue Mississippi Power, during the hearing, did not show sufficient evidence to warrant a certificate of convenience and necessity—a document which states there is a need for the line and approves its construction.

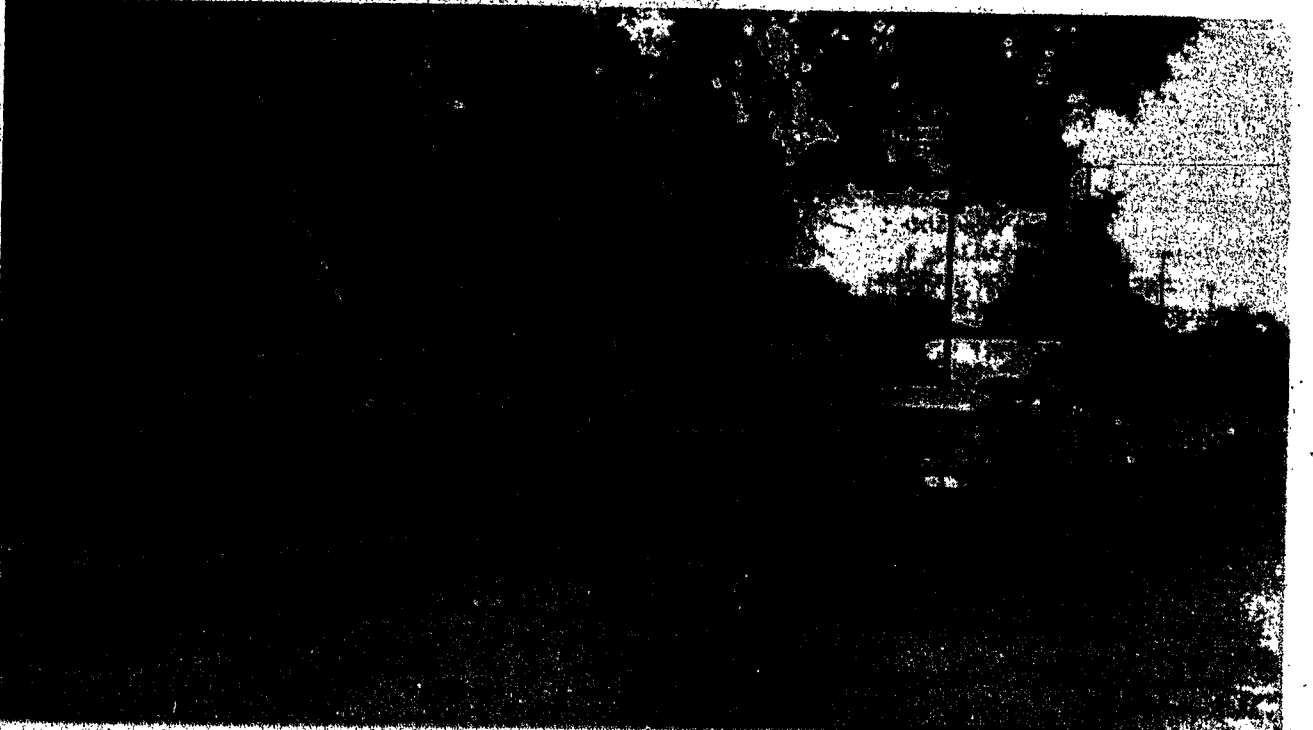

Tyner claims Mississippi Power failed to show that the line will benefit any Mississippi customers.

That same opinion was reflected in a statement issued by Commission Chairman Lynn Havens of the state's Southern District after he cast the only vote against the line.

"I think that Mississippi Power Company should be completely truthful of where the extreme pressure to build this line came from. It is because Georgia Power Company and Alabama

Two burglary suspects arrested

By ELLIS CUEVAS

Two persons were arrested on Wednesday and charged for burglary and grand larceny according to Hancock Investigator Delbert Seay.

Seay said, "Terry Payne, 27, of Waveland and Paul Martin Jr., 22, of Bay St. Louis were both arrested in connection with a Shoreline Park burglary reported on July 18."

Both were placed under a $6,000 each bond and are scheduled to appear before Justice Court Judge Bruce Necaise for a preliminary hearing.

The arrests were made by Seay, Waveland Investigators Robert (Poochy) Tartavouille and Sandra Henley, and Waveland Patrolman John Wilkerson.

The case is being handled by both the Hancock Sheriff's office and Waveland police.

ESCAPE CAPTURED

Corey Steve Sylvester, one of two Hancock prisoners who fled the jail on July 5 has been apprehended in Curry, Texas according to Hancock Sheriff Ronald Peterson.

Peterson stated, "We are now making arrangements for his return to Hancock County."

The second escapee, George Smith was apprehended about mid-night on the same day.

Sylvester was in jail on a burglary charge.

ETV Briefs

IN-SCHOOL SERIES

Through a grant from the Mississippi Arts Commission (MAC), two instructional series will be a part of Mississippi ETV's daytime in-school schedule this fall.

"The Art Chest" and "The Art Maker" (a new series for the 1982-83 school year) were leased by Mississippi ETV from funds provided by MAC.

"The Art Chest" is a series in arts and crafts for children in the primary grades. The series is designed to emphasize creative expression while building the child's confidence and enjoyment in simple art projects. The series provides step-by-step techniques in drawing, painting, paper folding, paper cutting and sculpting and introduces new art projects.

"The Art Maker" is a series of arts and crafts telelessons for children in the intermediate grades. The series develops skills in free brush painting, crayon drawing, designing, the use of chalk and charcoal, paper cutting and folding, printing, design and texture.

Said Lida Rogers, executive director of MAC, "We think this is a very worthwhile endeavor—to be able to work together with ETV on this type of project. We welcomed this opportunity and look forward to more."

POSSE COMMANDER—Billy Griffith was recently installed in Houma, La. as commander of the Terrebonne Parish Sheriff's Flying Posse. He is son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William W. Griffith Sr. and is married to the former Laura Piazza, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Piazza of Bay St. Louis. He is employed as a charter pilot for a private oil company. The Terrebonne Parish Flying Posse assists the Sheriff's Department in search and rescue missions over waterways and swamps of the area. They also engage in civic projects, with their current major project being 'Parc Extraordinaire,' a playground for handicapped children.

Energy Answers

Q. How much of the average family budget is needed to pay for energy?

A. The latest federal figures say that energy costs may now add up to as much as 20 percent of the family budget. In 1980, energy took only about 5 percent of a family's annual income.

Q. What's the latest on efficiency standards for appliances? Are they dead and gone?

A. In effect, yes. They have been listed in the Reagan administration's "unnecessary regulations" column since the administration came into office. Now the Department of Energy (DOE) reports that efficiency standards for eight major appliances (refrigerators, freezers, refrigerator-freezers, clothes dryers, water heaters, room air-conditioners, and furnaces) would not result in enough additional conservation of energy to make the standards economically feasible.

DOE is proposing that there be no standards in response to the congressionally-mandated standards which have been under consideration since the Carter administration. If the proposal wins support, problems will be created for states and manufacturers which have already established standards according to the proposed federal rules.

Correction

An article in last Sunday's edition of The Sea Coast Echo entitled "World's Fair benefits eyed" inadvertently listed Bay St. Louis Realtor Maggie Dantagan as a restaurateur. The Echo apologizes for the error.

Hancock General Hospital Administrator Phil Langston reports hospital occupancy is averaging 35 patients per day, or 65 percent of capacity.

A Hancock County Grand Jury report published in last Sunday's Sea Coast Echo inadvertently listed the hospital's occupancy rate at 35 percent.

Man gets 25 years for rape charge

Richard L. Weaver, 28, of Bay St. Louis was sentenced Thursday to 25 years in the State Penitentiary after pleading guilty to charges of rape and aggravated assault.

The District Attorney's office recommended Circuit Court Judge Kosta Vlahos impose a 20-year sentence on the aggravated assault charge and a 25-year sentence on the rape charge, to run concurrently.

Vlahos included in his order that Weaver receive a psychiatric evaluation while in prison.

Public defender Yvonne Chapman Sills, Weaver's attorney, asked Vlahos to show leniency to her client, whose actions were the result of mental pressures and strain after his mother died.

Weaver was arrested March 21, after a man called police and reported his girl friend had been abducted.

Earlier that day, the man, with a juvenile girl and infant child had driven Weaver from Pass Christian to Bay St. Louis after Weaver's car apparently became stuck in a ditch in Pass Christian.

After accepting the ride, Weaver allegedly forced the man from his car and took the woman and child to nearby woods where he raped the woman.

Also in Circuit Court action this week, William Thomas Dykes, 25, of Kiln was found guilty of the February 1980 burglary of the Kiln Annunciation School where meats, turkeys, eggs and other food items were taken.

He was sentenced to seven years in the Mississippi State Penitentiary.

Hancock Investigator Delbert Seay noted Saturday that this was Dykes' second offense. He had formerly served time in Texas for burglary.

John Mark Johnson, 22, of Leesburg, Miss. plead guilty to armed robbery of a Diamondhead service station.

In that incident a high speed chase resulted in Johnson's apprehension in St. Tammany Parish in Louisiana.

He was sentenced to serve three years in the state penitentiary with no parole.

Power Company (members of the the Southern Company of which Mississippi is a part) will sell untold millions on this particular line which will not flow back to their rate payers, but flow directly to the stockholders of these companies.

Havens Friday claimed the 'bulk' of the power will be sold by Georgia and Alabama 'as soon as the line is completed.'

He said Mississippi Power's share of the sales will be 'minimal' by comparison.

In his statement, Havens also pointed out that Mississippi Power representatives are uncertain if Mississippi customers might be made to pay for a higher priced oil-generated electricity while a lower cost coal-generated electricity is being sold to Texas.

When asked that question at the hearing, Havens said the power company's response was "I do not know, I hope not."

Tyner and Sheila Madden, co-chairman of SMROD, both attributed the commission's decision to approve construction of the line to high pressure lobbying tactics by the utility company following the public hearing.

Tyner labeled the lobbying tactics 'disgusting' and Madden stated, "I'd like to know what Mississippi Power Company's 'tab' is for all the winning and dining and wheeling and dealing they did."

Havens stated the utility company 'put the most pressure on that I've ever seen up here.'

According to the Sun-Herald's Jackson reporter, that pressure came from an Alabama's U.S. Rep. Tom Bevill acting through Mississippi Gov. William Winter, and local county officials along the coast including Long Beach Mayor Glenn Mitchell.

Mayor Larry Bennett, who presided over the meeting, stated, "We are pushing as hard as we can to obtain a Farmers Home Administration Loan."

How much money will have to be borrowed to provide services to the annexed area has not yet been determined.

The Bay St. Louis City Council has hired the Jackson engineering firm Lewis and Eaton Partnership to undertake a study to determine that figure.

The study has not yet been completed, but City Clerk Eddie Favre told Hirstius at the meeting that a rough cost estimate after reviewing Eaton's preliminary report revealed a figure between $14 to $15 million for improvements in the entire city.

According to Bennett, "Mississippi will be included in a national pool with other states vying for FmHA loans."

"Our chances are better that we will be expedited to more funds," he said.

However, when questioned by Hirstius if any applications for the funds have been submitted, Bennett replied 'no,' adding that Eaton is still working on the final report.

Favre requested the revenue sharing funds be spent on housing rehabilitation following depletion of Housing and Urban Development Funds now being used to renovate a section of the city targeted under the 1981 Small Cities Project.

She also suggested the money be used to repair streets. She claimed repaving work in the city to cover potholes 'sank right back into the original holes,' and we're right back where we started in the beginning.

She noted streets are being torn up to install gas lines in the Small Cities portion of the city and stated, "I hope you use the money to repair streets once they are torn up."

She also suggested the money be used to improve drainage and made a final request to erect additional street lights. Bennett stated the city spent some $68,000 of last year's $94,000 of revenue sharing money on electric bills for street lighting alone.

"You can see this is one reason why I've held off a little bit on the street lighting," he said.

McDonald requested the city continue to support the Senior Citizen Program and thanked the city for its support in the past.

Last year the city allocated some $1,800 to that program.

Bennett assured McDonald that the city would continue working with the senior citizens.

A letter requesting continued support for the Retired Senior Volunteer Program was also read at the hearing. Favre said the city allocated $900 to that organization last year.

Bennett said citizen input would be considered when Favre prepares the final budget and submits it to the council, 'hopefully by the first week in August,' Favre said.

Bennett stated the city has no specific plans for the money at this time.

Favre noted after the meeting that the final budget proposal will include revenue sharing allocations.

Another public hearing will be scheduled when that final package is prepared and sent to the council for approval.

Frank Taconi

On Saturday, our longtime friend Frank Taconi made his last journey, and that to St. Mary's Cemetery in Bay St. Louis.

A native of Bay St. Louis, he worked his way through the ranks of the US Postal Service to the top position here as Bay St. Louis postmaster.

He was part of and saw many changes in the postal service, as we can remember seeing him many years ago delivering mail as a relief on the old horse-pulled wagon.

A friend to so many people, he was dedicated to his fellowman.

Frank was very active in The Clement R. Bontemps American Legion Post No. 139 of Bay St. Louis, serving two terms as post commander. A current officer in the legion, he also headed numerous committees in the veterans organization for many years.

He enjoyed life and liked living in his native Bay St. Louis. Frank did his share of 'chasing mullets,' like many of us in the Bay of St. Louis.

A family man, Taconi was dedicated to his wife, two daughters, his nine grandchildren and other family members.

He is now gone, but the good memories of him as a husband, parent, grandparent, citizen, postmaster, legionaire, church member, and just plain good friend of so many people will remain.

DRUNK DRIVERS

Plans to obligate more than half of its 1983 budget for drunk driver control are currently being considered by the Governor's Highway Safety Program.

According to program director Ira Lacy, the state agency expects to receive approval for a $1.2 million budget later this month. Of the projected allocation, approximately $800,000 is expected to be used in reducing the number of alcohol-related traffic accidents in the state.

A major portion of the funds or about $500,000 is expected to go toward the newly created Community Intoxicated Driver Countermeasures Program, which is designed to create more citizen involvement in combating drunk driving on the community level.

The remaining portion will be used to fund such programs as Highway Patrol enforcement, alcohol awareness conferences and school alcohol-education programs.

"We've been approached by a number of concerned groups requesting that we devote more attention toward curbing the drunk driver menace," said Lacy, whose agency allocated approximately $160,000 for related programs in fiscal 1982.

"In the past, we've aimed our efforts primarily at law enforcement," he said. "This time we plan to involve everyone that we can."

Mississippi reported 632 fatal accidents in 1981. Of those, 70 were alcohol-related. It is possible, however, that the number of alcohol-related accidents is significantly underreported, says Lacy.

"National Highway Traffic Safety Administration data indicate that 50 percent of all fatal accidents involve drunk drivers," he said. "Recent reports on some Mississippi cities which test all drivers involved in fatal accidents indicate that alcohol involvement may be even higher than 50 percent in the state."

"If this trend is representative of our problem," Lacy added, "we could have had as many as 316 alcohol-related accidents in the state last year."

Representatives from 11 cities and counties reporting high alcohol-related accident rates were invited by GHSP to attend a two-day workshop in June to offer input into the special countermeasures program.

The workshop was made available to Jackson, Laurel, Biloxi, Meridian, Hattiesburg, Natchez, Gulfport, Greenville, Pascagoula, Southaven and Columbus/Lowndes County.

Biloxi, Greenville and Meridian have declined participation in the program for various reasons.

According to Lacy, the remaining cities will compete for consideration in the program. Funds will be awarded only to applicants showing the greatest needs, interest and commitment to altering the community's drunk driving problem.

Program plans currently call for improved coordination between law enforcement officials and the courts systems, an informative public awareness program and strong community involvement.

As a means of improving coordination between law enforcement officials and the courts system, a DUI case coordinator will be placed in each community for the purpose of screening an offender's drinking problem and making recommendations to the judge about the case.

A program coordinator will also be hired to work with law enforcement officials, treatment agencies and a traffic safety advisory council in making the public aware of the area's intoxicated driving problem and of ways to assist in altering them.

"I really believe the success of the countermeasures program is going to depend on the citizens in the selected communities," said Lacy. "Most citizens are law abiding."

"If they are just made aware of the problems caused from drunk driving, law enforcement would improve and the courts system would work better," he said. "It would be a lot safer to drive."

The Bottom Line

Candid Answers To Your Questions About Advertising and Business Topics.

By S. GALE DENLEY
Associate Professor of Journalism
University of Mississippi

On several occasions you have written about how an ad should be put together. But, could you go through it all, one more time? I Have Trouble Remembering.

Dear IHTR: So do I, and I won't promise this is the last time. But, to break it down, there are basically five main ingredients or components in an ad.

These include 1) Illustrations, 2) Headlines, 3) Copy, 4) Name or Logo, and 5) White Space.

Let's take them in order, week by week.

First, illustrations are important for two primary reasons.

They attract attention and, secondly, often provide information not easily, or sometimes possibly, conveyed otherwise.

Illustrations may be photos or artwork. Local photos are good attention-getters if they are good photos.

But the best illustration will be one that shows the product to its best advantage.

And this determination will obviously be based on the nature of the product.

For some items, such as paint, the result of use, or the ease of application, will be the primary point. Therefore, illustrations depicting the result of the use, or showing the ease of use, would serve best.

For products that are to be utilized as sold, the fine details of manufacture may be the best selling points.

Products and services of an intangible value, such as insurance and some hygiene products, may require a mood or emotion-creating illustration.

But as our culture becomes more and more visually oriented, good illustrations in ads become more and more important.

But don't fall in the trap of using an illustration, just for the sake of using one. However, any illustration that remotely ties in with your ad will probably result in a more effective ad than a layout without illustrations.

Secondly, headlines may perform several functions.

These include leading the reader's interest to the message of the ad. The head may be a transfer or transition device from the illustration, or it may be a stand-alone attention device.

Headlines for ads should ideally contain an element of news, encompass a specific benefit, limit or select the audience and/or curiosity.

The headline may be in the form of a statement from a person in the illustration, or simply a straight-forward statement.

But it should always be addressed to the prospect and his/her needs. Emphasize "you," not "us," in the head.

An element of news in the head is an assurance of attention. It may be a new product, and improved product (of formula), or it may be a new use for an old product.

It's news that affects them is a common commodity desired by all persons. So, why not give it to them?

Benefits of the use of the product may be obvious, but state them anyway. It's hard to overdo it.

Audience selection is usually a matter of direct address in the headline, such as "tall men," "big men," or "mothers." The selection process limits the general audience, but heightens the interest of those specifically addressed.

Curiosity is a hard one. It usually means being clever. But, successful curiosity heads must be genuinely clever. If they don't work, they fall really flat.

The safest headline is usually one that gives a straight-forward statement to the prospect about his needs. If this is done, the headline can't be too bad.

making a purchase can protect against future repair bills.

Products with full warranties may cost more than those with limited; however, it may be worthwhile to spend the additional money in order to acquire full protection.

If you have any difficulties with your warranties or guarantees, contact Attorney General Bill Allain, Consumer Protection Division, P.O. Box 220, Jackson, Mississippi 39205.

TIPS ON TIMESHARING

Attorney General Bill Allain says that more and more consumers are looking into buying a timeshare vacation which allows them to use a vacation home one or more weeks a year.

In fact, according to the Federal Trade Commission, timeshare sales have nearly doubled every year since the mid-70s.

But like any other major purchase, Allain states that you want to make sure you get what you expect from the deal.

So, despite the majestic mountains or crystal waters, don't act on impulse. Before you sign any papers or pay any fees, review all documents or have an attorney familiar with timesharing look at the contract for you.

Here are some tips to follow:

Watch out for gift giveaways. They're just to get you to listen to a sales pitch. Common promotional gimmicks include gems with little or no value as jewelry, gold ingots with very little gold, and "free" vacations that don't cover transportation or food.

Think about your vacation habits. To take full advantage of timesharing, you'll need regular vacation plans that don't change at the last minute. If you're looking at timesharing plans with many locations, be sure that there are enough units at the sites to accommodate you as often as you would like.

The biggest benefits of timesharing are the use of the facilities, not profits. So evaluate any investment claims carefully. Consider possible resale problems, closing costs, broker's commission and that you might have to provide financing.

If you are getting into an exchange program where you will be able to swap with other resorts in different locations, remember that the swaps usually cannot be guaranteed. Be sure to check any restrictions that apply to these exchanges before you sign.

If the facility is not complete, check the company's record. Also get a written commitment that the resort will be finished as promised. Find out, as well, what your rights are if the builder or management company has financial problems or defaults. Otherwise you could lose everything.

Don't forget that the total cost of your vacation each year will also include travel, finance charges, and annual maintenance fees that will probably rise. It's a good idea to compare your total costs with rates for a similar stay in the same location.

Finally, be sure that everything the salesperson promises is written into the contract. Ask about a cooling off period during which you can have time to reconsider your decision.

For additional information, contact Attorney General Bill Allain, Consumer Protection Division, P.O. Box 220, Jackson, Mississippi 39205.

Dear Sir:

I just served a week with the Grand Jury for the first time and like most people, I was "terrified," not knowing what to expect.

However, I can recommend now that anyone of you who is called on to serve, should do so.

It may be an inconvenience to some, but you will not only exercise your duty as a citizen, but learn a lot about legal terms and the way our courts and county offices operate.

If you are chosen to serve on the Grand Jury, you get a chance to tour many places that you may never see otherwise.

Besides, you get to meet a lot of awfully nice people.

MISSISSIPPI ECONOMIC COUNCIL

HAZARDOUS WASTE

Conventional wisdom has it that when one generation enjoys something, the next generation has to pay for it. That is just one of the questions which are attached to the problem of dealing with hazardous wastes.

Aside from the central environmental and technical issues of the hazardous waste problem, there's the question of public policy. Should the public have a policy on hazardous waste? The answer is, assuredly, "yes."

State residents should recognize that hazardous wastes inevitably result from the production of economically beneficial goods. It follows that the community should accept responsibility for the safe and effective management of those wastes.

Protection of public health and safety should continue to be principal considerations associated with responsible hazardous waste management. Assuring safe disposal facilities for the management and regulation of hazardous wastes should be viewed as a social responsibility and a necessary governmental service.

The Mississippi Economic Council believes that the state should take action to promote establishment of a hazardous waste management facility. The absence of such a facility could prove to be a hindrance to further economic growth.

Higher Learning Board hikes requirements

The Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning has approved the requirement of 13½ specific high school units in order to gain admission to the public universities of Mississippi.

Effective 1988, freshmen students entering the fall term must have earned four units of English (all with substantial writing components); three units of mathematics (Algebra I, geometry, and Algebra II); three units of science (choosing from biology, advanced biology, chemistry, advanced chemistry, physics, and advanced physics); two and one-half units of social sciences (must include U. S. history and American government); one required elective unit (choosing from a foreign language, or mathematics above Algebra II—or a science chosen from previously mentioned science courses).

The board recommended that students pursue two units of foreign languages, take a mathematics course during their senior year, take a computer science course, and gain a level of typing proficiency.

Policies pertaining to transfer students and to special circumstances will be formulated at a later date.

The initial proposal was presented at the June board meeting, at which time the board decided to seek input from a cross-section of individuals.

Some 447 surveys were sent to educators, legislators, and other officials. Eighty percent of those responding to the survey supported the board's intent to strengthen the requirements that entering freshmen must meet.

Regarding the unit requirements, Dr. Robert W. Harrison Jr. of Yazoo City, board president, said, "This is not an attempt to keep anyone out of school, but rather to improve the preparation of the students entering college."

Based on the recommendation of the policy committee and after having consulted with the state Attorney General's office, the Board of Trustees reaffirmed the mission of Mississippi University of Women as a single sex institution.

However, in light of the decision by the U. S. Supreme Court on July 1, 1982, MUW will immediately enroll qualified students in the university regardless of sex.

"This whole thing is a discouragement," said Dr. James W. Strobel, president of MUW. "My recommendation all through the process would be to keep the 'W' for women only."

Mrs. Carolyn Ritter, president of MUW Alumnae Association, stated in a presentation to the Board on Wednesday, "We were extremely disappointed that the Court deemed it necessary to alter the original mission of the school by liberalizing its traditional entrance requirements. We still firmly believe that Mississippi University for Women will continue its role and have as its objective a quality higher education for women. We also believe this university holds a special place in society by contributing to the economical and cultural climate of the state of Mississippi."

Other action of the board included the approval of its building committee's request to name the new marine education center building at the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory the J. L. Scott Marine Education Center.

Scott is associate director for construction and physical affairs and has been employed by the board since 1947.

This was the first time the board of trustees has honored a staff member of the board in such a manner, stated Dr. E. E. Thrash, executive secretary and director.

The board also approved a request to name the toxicology building at the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory the William M. Shoemaker Toxicology Building.

Shoemaker is a former member of the board of trustees and took special interest in the research lab.

The board of trustees approved the following projects for submission to the State Building Commission for inclusion in the 1983-84 legislative request for funding: Alcorn State University nursing building equipment; Jackson State University construction and equipment for health center; Mississippi State University for new boiler for steam plant, water main extension and water well No. four; University of Mississippi water well replacement, water system—

Phase II; and new laundry facility for the University of Mississippi Medical Center.

The board also requested the Building Commission to proceed with the reactivation of the progress on projects funded last year, but frozen because of projected fund shortages.

The Commission of Budget and Accounting has now released these funds.

These projects include construction of nursing building at Alcorn, laundry facility at Mississippi Valley State, and renovation of Taylor Hall at Mississippi University for Women.

Funds were also released for furniture and equipment for the College of Veterinary Medicine at Mississippi State University, the Acute Services Wing at the Medical Center, the Physical Education Building at the University of Mississippi, and contract documents for a health and physical education complex at the University of Southern Mississippi.

Long range economic prospects bright, strong signs of recovery not likely before 1983

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article, entitled "Monetary Madness" by Thomas B. Silver, president of Public Research, Syndicated in Claremont, Calif., is supplied to The Sea Coast Echo by PHS.

Last fall, few people expected a severe economic decline. In fact, most economists believed that we would avoid recession altogether. On October 26, 1981, the Wall Street Journal reported that:

"A group of some 40 forecasters surveyed monthly by Blue Chip Economic Indicators...looks for a slight rise of 0.5% in the real GNP in the fourth quarter, with stronger gains coming in 1982. 'Expectations of a stronger economy in 1982 stem in large part from a belief that the Reagan administration tax cuts' will be stimulating business."

Despite my support of President Reagan's tax cuts, I strongly dissented from this rosy consensus view.

On Oct. 27, in an article entitled, "Will President Reagan be the next Hoover?", I predicted a "severe economic slump" and suggested that the president "should caution his countrymen that the terrible economic shocks and storms may lie directly ahead."

There were strong reasons for pessimism last fall: First, the tax cut had been delayed and diluted. Second, it had been offset by bracket creep and increased social security taxes. Third—and most important—monetary policy had been unprecedentedly erratic.

For a whole year, from April 1980 to April 1981, the Federal Reserve had allowed the money supply to run wild.

Month after month it raged upward at the torrid rate of more than 11 percent. As a result, by the spring of 1981, shortly after Mr. Reagan became president, inflation was raging out of control and interest rates were above 20 percent.

At that point the Federal Reserve, in a new fit of monetary madness, leaped upon the money supply and began choking it, until it was limp and lifeless.

From April to October the money supply actually declined. This totally irresponsible contraction of the money supply, following right on the heels of a totally irresponsible expansion of the money supply, plunged the economy into its worst decline since the Great Depression.

Now we are again presented with optimistic predictions from the administration and most private economists. President Reagan says that the recession is bottoming out. The blue chip forecasters are echoing his opinion.

And indeed, they may be right. Preliminary data indicate that the economy grew a little in the second quarter. Moreover, the July 1 tax cut will be substantial. Unlike the first installment last October, this cut will be only partially undone by bracket creep and recent federal, state and local tax increases.

Unfortunately, fiscal sanity is once more being accompanied by monetary madness. Last fall, after being strangled nearly to death, the moribund money supply suddenly sprang to life and advanced vigorously.

From September to January it increased at the astonishing annualized rate of 15 percent. It was this increase that caused the economy to stir during the spring.

But since January the Federal Reserve has again been squeezing the money supply into lifelessness. At the end of June the money supply was several billion dollars lower than it was at its peak in January.

It may well be, therefore, that the recession will continue through the second half of 1982, or that the incipient recovery will be anemic. If so, our financial system will continue to be dangerously vulnerable to major unexpected shocks, in addition to the steadily mounting toll of corporate and personal bankruptcies and failures of financial institutions.

The long range prospects for the economy are bright, so long as President Reagan refuses to be deflected from the present course of tax cuts and moderate growth of the money supply.

Reduction of government taxing, spending, and regulation is wise. The growth rate of the money supply, though dangerously volatile, is slowing.

From April 1980 to April 1981 it was greater than 11 percent, but during the past year it has fallen to around 4 percent.

If the Federal Reserve succeeds in its announced goal of making money grow both slowly and steadily, we can look forward to a prolonged and healthy economic recovery.

Excessive tanning ups risk of skin cancer

(Presented as a public service by the Mississippi State Medical Association and The Sea Coast Echo.)

The evidence is clear that repeated and persistent exposure to sunlight can be one of the major factors in causing cancer of the skin in susceptible persons.

The Mississippi State Medical Association points out that skin cancer has long been an occupational hazard to the farmer, sailor and rancher. Ardent outdoor sportsmen and sun worshippers share the same risk.

Cancer of the skin occurs more often in the South and Southwest, areas noted for sunny climates. Skin cancer occurs most frequently on exposed parts of the body—face, ears, hands or neck. Skin cancer occurs more often in light-skinned than in dark-skinned persons. Excessive sunlight ages the skin.

Years of overexposure to the sun will result in leathery texture, wrinkles, skin folds and sagging skin. Blochy pigmentation will replace desired tan. Dermatologists (medical skin specialists) recommend the regular use of sun-screening agents by outdoor workers and others who continually expose themselves to the sun.

Commonly used drugs such as antibacterial agents in medicated soaps, drugs to control high blood pressure, oral anti-diabetic drugs, some tranquilizers and some antibiotics can cause the skin to become photosensitive to sunlight.

The skin may burn on even slight exposure. These individuals must avoid direct sunlight as much as possible, and wear long-sleeved garments and wide-brimmed hats when out of doors.

Friends of Library membership increases

By JOE PILET
Coordinator

Friends of the Library Two new life memberships were added this week to the roster of Friends of The Library. Mrs. Elmo Nolan of Pass Christian and the William P. Hilliker of Paradise Point Drive in Bay St. Louis.

Mrs. Nolan said, "I am joining Friends of The Library because it is a way I can express my appreciation of the fine services rendered by the library staff. They were so helpful when eye surgery prevented me from reading, and talking books were made available in record time."

Both new members expressed pleasure in the courteous treatment received during their frequent trips to the library.

Mrs. Beatrice Ladner who throughout several years has kept a scrapbook account of publicity given the library and its friends plans to have her scrapbooks on display at each regular meeting of the friends. She praised the Sea Coast Echo and the Daily Herald for generous space given throughout the years, and said "These articles keep our community informed of the many services—talking books, books with large type, wonderful reference books, the activities going on in the reception room, duplicating services, records for both young and old, and displays of paintings and very interesting exhibits which are changed monthly in the display case."

Former Mayor Warren Carver who now heads the Chamber of Commerce's beautification program made a splendid offer. "I will personally take my lawn mower and help put the grounds in better shape," he said. "However, I will not do it alone. We need a few energetic and public spirited volunteers."

Carver said he felt the city clean up crews were doing an adequate job considering the small number of workers that can be provided by the budget. He felt, however, that the individual citizens could and should show more civic pride in keeping the grounds in the vicinity of their homes and businesses in good condition.

A supply of letterhead paper was made available last week and Eddie Palmer of the A to Z Paper Company in New Orleans has donated a supply of paper cups to be used during Friends meetings.

Mrs. Richard (Gail) Thomas has volunteered to give an added touch of beauty to each monthly meeting by supplying a living plant for display. The plants will be exhibited on a plant stand made by senior citizens in their workshop.

NO INJURIES—Chuck James, Waveland patrolman, directs traffic at the intersection of Washington Street and US-90 in Bay St. Louis following a two-car accident Thursday evening at 7:29 p.m. According to Bay Police Department Auxiliary Chief Brenda Anderson, Roderick Hardie, 19, of Route 2 Box 300 Bay St. Louis attempted to take a left turn while proceeding east on US-90. He was struck by a 1982 Cadillac driven by Thomas S. Merie, 54, of New Orleans. No injuries were reported and no citations were issued by police. Investigator Jim Clark and Officer Murray Laidner of the Bay Police Department responded to the call as well as patrolman James. (Photo by Mike Benvenutti)

Rules

At the wastewater board meeting, Longo explained the district is named for Waveland because they were the only local entity pushing the legislation before its passage.

Bay Councilman Sheldon Seuzeneau repeatedly asked why the name could not be changed.

The mayor said changing the legislation would open a can of worms and Waveland has the more environmentally acceptable sewage treatment system.

Councilman James Thrifley said the name changed to Hancock County Regional Wastewater Management District would reflect a spirit of unity in the intergovernmental agreements.

Longo explained the district bears the name of Waveland since he and other officials from that city helped formulate the law.

"I could have put my name on it (the legislation) since I helped put it together, but in humility I didn't," the mayor humorously stated.

Longo concluded that Waveland might possibly consider the name change.

Regarding the Bay's demand to pay for a sewer system development study (201 study) and construction only for that city, Longo said the study would have to be a districtwide document based on state requirements.

There would be no way to segregate the Bay system from that plan, he added.

Seuzeneau said the Bay would like to operate its own sewer system.

City Clerk and Alderman Barbara Rappold stated, "We didn't ask for this, it's Jackson (the department) who said this is how it should be."

Kellar said, "We (Hancock County) don't have any objections to you (Bay St. Louis) running your own system."

Longo explained, "Specifically what the state is looking for is a management scheme for wastewater treatment."

"The cost of treatment is borne fairly and equally by everybody," he stated.

Bay Councilman Gene Taylor said a plan to improve the city's oxidation pond sewage treatment facility would be an environmentally acceptable system and allow lower operating costs rates to citizens.

Longo agreed with hiring an independent wastewater board secretary. He reported Rappold has been serving in that capacity for free and she would welcome not performing that duty.

In reference to the Bay request for two representatives from each entity, Gex said that action would be illegal since legislation stipulates one representative for each area.

Bay City Clerk Edward Favre suggested an interagency agreement might be appropriate to solve differences.

Longo replied, "We can do anything just as long as we don't violate the law which set up the district."

At the Waveland board meeting, Longo said the district name should not be changed because Waveland is the only participant "offering a tangible thing for the district."

He said the state would not accept the Bay's lagoon system and the county has no facilities to offer.

Gex reported the district name could be changed if the wastewater board would vote to do so.

He also noted there was no feasible way to segregate Bay St. Louis out of the overall plan.

Regarding the Bay's desire to keep any facilities not utilized for wastewater treatment, Longo stated, "What would the district do with a lagoon if it wasn't needed to treat wastewater?"

The mayor said, in rejecting the proposal for expanding the district board membership, that additional members would "bog down the district in the mud forever."

In reference to the Bay demand for an independent secretary, Rappold endorsed the move.

MONDAY NIGHT MEETING

The wastewater board Monday evening voted 2-1 against accepting the Bay's approved agreement with Bennett casting the only positive vote.

The Bay mayor added he did not agree with all changes recommended by the council, but did not specify which changes he considered favorable.

Bennett requested the Wednesday meeting so he would have an opportunity to meet with the council Tuesday night.

Longo, Kellar and Lucien Gex, Waveland city attorney, discussed the Bay's agreement just before Bennett and Joseph Gex, Bay city attorney, arrived at the meeting.

The Waveland mayor later informed the Bay representatives it was impossible for the wastewater board to accept the city's agreement basically because state legislation would be needed to make the agreement changes.

Bay St. Louis agreement basically requires the district name be changed to Hancock County Regional Wastewater Management District, the city pay no engineering fees except for Bay projects, and two representatives for each city and the county.

The Bay attorney explained the council does not want to pay for a wastewater plant system engineering study, but for a plan utilizing the city's sewage oxidation pond.

Waveland utilizes a sewage plant system.

Lucien Gex said the State Department of Natural Resources Bureau of Pollution Control would decide one type of wastewater treatment system to be utilized by the entire district.

The lagoon and treatment plant would become the district's property, he reported.

The city attorney added that he understood the Bay wastewater system has been criticized by the BPC.

Joseph Gex stated, "They (the city council) don't want to join the Waveland treatment facility per se."

Longo reported, "All treatment facilities will be turned over to the district. All money received will also be turned over to the district."

"I don't see how we can accept the resolution," the mayor stated.

Kellar said Bay St. Louis should have recommended the legislative changes several months ago.

The Bay attorney reported the council fears some 80 acres the city owns adjacent to the oxidation pond would have to be given to the district.

Lucien Gex replied, "The state says the district can't buy the lagoon, so if you want to keep it, that's beautiful."

Joseph Gex then noted the Bay agreement is not asking for changes by the board, but is asking the wastewater group to appeal to the legislature to change the law which created the district.

The Waveland attorney said Bay St. Louis is also seeking veto power in any board decisions, but said such authority would snarl attempts to raise rates or offer a bond issue for improvements.

The Bay attorney argued Bay St. Louis should not be required to assist in a bond issue for another community.

Longo said any funding would benefit the people of Hancock County as a whole and not any particular area.

"I think we're missing the point and I wish there was more trust here. Many other things will be lost which could help the people of this county unless we move rapidly," the mayor stated.

Kellar said, "Do you think Mayor Longo will raise rates here for a Hancock County project. Johnny (Longo) is not going to do that and Bay St. Louis isn't either. I don't know what they're (the city council) arguing about."

Joseph Gex explained he was simply presenting the Bay council's recommendation which was originally a 10-page document.

Kellar added, "I think the Bay St. Louis sewage system is in the worst condition. There's no way this body can adopt the Bay's agreement."

Longo said the state might halt all Bay St. Louis construction if an agreement is not finalized soon.

Lucien Gex reported the originally proposed document was a 'loose' agreement which does not bind any parties until an engineering study of countywide wastewater needs is initiated and completed (a 201 study).

Longo stated, "The study is going to have to be completed soon. If Bay St. Louis doesn't join this district it will just have to join another."

South side of Valpine

Subdivision sells out, north side to open this week

The optioning of the last 2 lots on the south side of Valpine Subdivision, Phase I, has resulted in a decision to open the Northern Section.

These lots are heavily wooded with city utilities, 90' x 120', and have been approved by the Farm Home Administration.

Most of the new homes being built are 2 bedroom, bath & a half, brick, air conditioned houses.

Anyone desiring a plot or further details can contact C.C. McDonald Jr., 506-C Highway 99, or call 467-9708 during the day or 467-4433 at night or weekends.

These lots are covered under the Federal Fair Housing law.

Catfish processors healthy, farmers' prices depressed

Some Mississippi catfish growers may be hard to convince that the processed fish industry is both healthy and growing, but a catfish marketing specialist claims those kinds of facts are turning up.

Dr. Michael Jones, a marketing specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, said recent U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) reports show that sales of processed fish during the first four months of 1982 jumped 60 percent.

"With depressed prices for catfish at the farm ranging from 50 to 55 cents per pound, it is tough on many of our farmers to realize that the total industry is in good shape and growing," Jones said.

The marketing specialist said research findings, industry analyses and experts in the trade all point to the fact that this growth pattern for processed fish is going to continue.

"Since about 80 to 90 percent of the nation's catfish processing capacity is located in Mississippi, the state is benefitting significantly from the growth," Jones said.

Quoting from a USDA report, Jones said commercial processors sold 18.4 million pounds of farm-raised catfish, which is more than 60 percent higher than the 11.4 million pounds sold during the same period in 1981.

"Trade sources indicate that by the end of this year, the state's processors will have processed 50 percent more fish than in 1981," Jones said. "That will approach almost 100 million pounds of live catfish."

Jones said total sales of processed fish are estimated to have increased by an even greater percentage because of the big increase in the "live-haul" market where fish are transported live out of the state rather than being processed.

"No data is available on the recent growth of the live-haul market, but many people concede it has jumped in recent months to record proportions," Jones said.

Jones said several factors are contributing to the expansion of catfish sales. Among them are:

—An increase in the size and number of firms processing, packaging and distributing catfish.

"These firms are increasing marketing and promotional efforts for catfish," he said.

"Several of these large-scale commercial fish packaging units in the state can process 100,000 pounds of catfish per day."

—Larger volumes of processed fish are moving to consumers through the commercial food distribution system in the U.S.

"In the earlier stages of the industry, the processed fish were distributed directly to restaurants on a local and regional basis, but they are now marketed to a greater extent through large food distributors and retailing chains," Jones said.

—Catfish is being made available in a wide variety of forms, such as portion controlled, pre-breaded frozen filets.

"These new product forms make catfish accessible to more markets than in the past, such as fast food type restaurants or the frozen food sections in grocery stores," Jones said.

The marketing specialist said the future is bright for catfish. He offers three reasons why:

1. Catfish meat is high in protein and relatively low in calories. "The basic economics of growing catfish as a food product are favorable when compared to other meat items due to the efficient food to protein conversion ratio of catfish," Jones said. "It takes only 1.7 pounds of feed to produce one pound of catfish under good conditions."

2. Catfish are consistent in several quality characteristics. "The most important criteria to food service buyers in a food item is consistency in quality, price and supply," Jones said. "Because catfish are produced in a controlled system, they rate high in these criteria when compared to ocean caught fish."

3. Catfish have potential for expansion in the American diet. "Aquaculture products in total represent less than one-half pound per capita annually, or about six percent of the total meat consumed," Jones said. "This leaves considerable room for expansion of catfish consumption."

These are facts about your community hospital, Hancock General Hospital:

What are the Emergency Services at the Hancock General Hospital?

On January 1, 1982, the Hancock General Hospital departed from a long standing tradition by employing full-time, trained Emergency Service Physicians. These trained physicians are employed seven days a week, twenty-four hours a day to see and treat all emergency cases who come to the Hancock General Hospital Emergency Room.

Dr. William Bradford, a resident of Waveland, heads up the Hancock Emergency Physicians group. Dr. Bradford, with specialized training in Emergency Medicine and several years of emergency room medical services, is also active in the community, serving as a volunteer fireman and providing emergency medical training to volunteer groups throughout Hancock County.

Dr. Alexander Ganiaris is a licensed physician with specialized training in Internal Medicine. Dr. Ganiaris also has varied emergency room experience.

Dr. Charmaine McCleave is the third member of the Hancock Emergency Group. Dr. McCleave, a graduate of the University of Mississippi School of Medicine, limits her practice to Emergency Medicine.

THE BOMB
While watching a recent PBS broadcast, "Nuclear Nightmares: Wars That Should Never Happen," a few considerations came to mind.

To begin with the aforementioned program was hosted and narrated by the respected actor Peter Ustinov.

How strange it was to hear that languid, gentry voice glide through whole paragraphs describing, in detail, the killing power of an intercontinental ballistic missile, or explaining about nuclear fire zones.

But, such is life (and death) in the 20th Century. It seems as though death is relative to population. When man began to walk upright and fashion weapons of twine and stone, he had very few homo sapien enemies.

Thus, the killing of only a few resulted in victory. Today, as the world's population numbers into the billions, it becomes necessary to decimate larger portions of the populace in order to gain ground. Hence—The Bomb, either atomic, hydrogen or neutron.

The Bomb itself has undergone a massive internal as well as external metamorphosis.

The external features, of course, are the most obvious. Pictures in books and magazines reveal The Bomb during J. Robert Oppenheimer's time. The most startling picture is one of a group of men gathered around a flatbed truck and loaded atop is a great egg-like projectile. If one didn't know the killing power of this odd cargo, the appearance would be almost laughable.

Today The Bomb is sleek, compact and deadly. It is capable of being fired from submarines, planes and silos (in the military rather than the agricultural sense).

They guide themselves to targets that will never know what happened. The flash will be intensely brief and the resulting nightmarish dawn will not be the beginning; it will be the end.

The internal workings of The Bomb have been modified and improved. Killing power is now compacted into "limited nuclear war" weapons and expanded into mega-tonnage missiles that can split New York City like a rotten grapefruit.

United States, Russia, Britain, France, China and India continue to expend money and manpower producing these hideous thermo-nuclear weapons in order to protect themselves and their allies.

Within the next ten years many third world nations are expected to possess The Bomb as will several international terrorist organizations.

Whereas today's ghastly news deals with plane crashes where hundreds of people die, tomorrow's headlines may involve thousands of casualties when the twisted mentality of a renegade band of reformers decides to detonate a nuclear weapon.

Where does it all stop? That's a question that won't be answered in this or any other newspaper column for that matter. It must come from our governments.

One of the best segments in "Nuclear Nightmares" was footage taken from a helicopter as it flew along the boundary between East and West Germany.

The demarcation line ran between agricultural fields, forests and a city.

The helicopter, careful to keep well within the "free zone," followed the barrier for over ten miles, recording everything it saw.

It was sobering to think that this was a tangible line of tension running across Europe, and all the while wondering if the line, strong and taut, will ever snap.

Someone once said, "The only difference between communism and capitalism is: In communism man exploits man and in capitalism it's just the opposite."

Accepting that statement at face value is very difficult indeed but, when one metaphysically reasons that he or she could have just as easily been born in the Soviet Union, China or Lebanon, it becomes much easier.

The fact is, we grow up in our homeland believing that we are the best. We're a part of a team—a nationalistic team pledging allegiance to our country and our flag. And so it should be...but allowing for the concept that the people across the Iron Curtain or The Great Wall of China deserve as much right to life as we Westerners do.

Which brings us full circle back to The Bomb and all its ugly aspects. And the imagery of two different peoples looking at one another through a barbed wire fence. Not knowing one another, they simply stand and gaze in a kind of silent ignorance.

Let us only hope that the peoples on either side are governed by men with foresight and courage. The foresight to see cluttered bomb shelters filled with suffering and dying, and the courage to prevent such an atrocity from ever occurring.

Contemporary school crises result from value conflicts

The crisis in American public education is one of getting our act together as a total society, not one of "shaping up the schools."

That's the advice of M. Donald Thomas, superintendent, Salt Lake City School District, writing in the "Bulletin," a monthly journal published by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

"The crisis in public education today is much like it was in previous decades of our history," Thomas contended. "Education is an expression of the value conflicts that exist in general society. And today there are many of them."

Among those value conflicts in schools is the feeling that teachers should be highly qualified, but "we pay them much less than people who play guitars or chase a ball around an athletic field."

He also suggested that while schools are expected to make good citizens out of students, many adults forget to vote.

What is needed, more than anything else, is a change in attitudes by everyone concerned with schools. Rather than attacking each other, it would be better for boards of education, administrators, teachers, parents, and others to examine themselves, according to the author.

"Boards of education must constantly work for and insist on excellence in all that the schools do," Thomas wrote.

"Boards should establish goals and standards, should reward those who achieve them, and should terminate those who cannot or will not achieve them."

Governing boards also could fight for their fair share of funding, set a direction for the school system, and be articulate defenders of the schools.

Thomas challenged school leaders to "work closely with parents and other social agencies. Outreach must become the norm of school operations. They (leaders) must form alliances with parents, senior citizens, business and industry, mental health services, the legislature, and any organization that can help the school do its work."

Educational leaders also must establish equal opportunity, and be catalysts for organizational reform. The school year, school day, classroom, and kindergarten through 12th grade structure could be reviewed.

Instruction

State Universities; Mississippi University for Women; and Universities of Southern Mississippi and Mississippi. Thrash states policies regarding transfer students and other special circumstances will be formulated at a later date.

The county school board also accepted a proposal from Conoco, Inc. of Hattiesburg for conducting vibroseis geophysical operations in the White Cypress Community area on the north side of the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 16, Township Five South, Range 15 West.

The board received a letter from Jack Fawcett of Conoco which offers the district $200-per-test.

"No shot hole drilling or explosives are involved in this vibroseis operation, and the process to be used cannot damage the minerals or geological structure underlying these tracts," the letter states.

Regarding activity fund accounts of the district's schools, the board accepted a proposal by Charles B. Bessant, a Bay St. Louis certified

He added the new procedure for accounting of the funds could be handled by the district's computer system in about one year, depending on the district office personnel's work load.

In other business at the 9 a.m. meeting at the Dan M. Russell Sr. Memorial Youth Court Center, the board:

—Approved an annually submitted agreement with the Pearl River Junior College Hancock County Vocational and Technical Training Center at Stennis International Airport to provide vocational training for the district's high school students. The courses offered include automobile mechanics, building and metal trades, and industrial electricity and welding.

—Based a report from Joseph Gen, board attorney, that the district must accept the insurance coverage, based on state statutes, from all interested companies even though a recent board legal advertisement states that only from county insurance companies.

Burglaries

she said.
Anderson said most of the items taken could be sold quickly on the street and included portable televisions, jewelry and cameras.
She advised any citizens to get a license plate number or description of any suspicious people and call police.
The burglaries are under investigation by the Bay Police Department investigator Jim Clark and Ben Palmer.

In other police action, Ronald L. Metz, 20, of Ohio was arrested by police and charged with stealing items from a Good Will Box in the A&P parking lot.
Anderson noted anyone seen rummaging through the boxes will be arrested.
"Only deposits are accepted. No withdrawals," she said.

New arrests made in jewelry heist

By ELLIS CUEVAS

A sixth person has been arrested in connection with the January 16, 1982 armed robbery of Fire Tower Road resident Virginia Guilbeau according to Hancock County Sheriff Ronald Peterson.

Peterson said Saturday, "James Conley, 51, of Knoxville, Tenn. is being held in the Knox County jail since his arrest by FBI agents after District Attorney Albert Nicaise requested his arrest for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution."

"An indictment was issued by the July Grand Jury for Conley and we feel he was the 'mastermind' behind the armed robbery of Mrs. Guilbeau, Peterson added.

Extradition procedures have begun for Conley's return to Hancock County Peterson said.

Peterson continued, "On Monday State and County officers will go to Athens County Jail in Athens, Ala., to pick-up Bob Stewart, 38, who was also apprehended this week by the FBI in connection with the robbery involving over $100,000 in diamonds."

He is accused of driving a woman suspect, Mrs. Marilyn Page, from Alabama and of helping case the area before the robbery according to the sheriff.

Another suspect in the armed robbery was arrested in mid-June and also released on a $50,000 bond.

Peterson said, "Dayanan D. 'Sam'

Buchanan, 42, of Gulfport is the one who allegedly drove Marilyn Page to the home and waited in his car during the robbery of Mrs. Guilbeau."

Dale J. Bissett, 41, of Biloxi, owner of Dale's Coin Shop, was released under bond after being charged with armed robbery. He is charged with breaking down the diamonds after the robbery," Peterson allowed. His bond was set at $50,000.

Marilyn Page, 35, who is allegedly accused of the actual robbery of Mrs. Guilbeau was arrested on May 20 in Jefferson, Texas and transferred to the Hancock County jail police say.

A sixth person believed to be involved in the armed robbery, Frank B. Malone, 38, of Gulfport, who was arrested in June as one of the accomplices in the Guilbeau robbery may also be involved in the death of a Gulfport woman, whose body was found in wrapped in chicken wire and weighted down with sand bags in a Waynesborough Creek on May 21 Peterson reports.

"Ballistics tests were made on a .38 caliber pistol taken from Malone at the time of his arrest and apparently link him with the woman's murder. He also had a large quantity of jewelry in his pockets when arrested. He was released under a $50,000 bond," Peterson said.

The case involves a joint effort by many law enforcement agencies Peterson noted.

Some 25 attend county revenue sharing hearing

By BRENT MACEY

Some 25 people attended a Hancock County revenue sharing hearing Monday to discuss some $516,307 the county expects to receive from the federal government for the upcoming 1981-82 fiscal year.

The majority of the people present were representatives of either the Hancock County Senior Citizens or Garden Isle Community Association; the only two organizations which had any comments regarding revenue sharing monies.

Eve McDonald, director of the Senior Citizen Center, noted she and four other members present at the Monday meeting represented some 220 members at the center.

All the women thanked the supervisors for their support in previous years and asked for continued support in the future.

Presently the supervisors have earmarked 2.5 percent of the revenue sharing budget for the senior citizens.

Road and bridge construction is earmarked to receive the majority of the funds—72 percent, while administration is slated to receive 14 percent, law enforcement, 4 percent; court costs, 4 percent; library, 2.5 percent; and sanitary landfill, 1 percent.

Leslie Page, president of the Garden Isle Association, and several other members of the organization addressed the board concerning the possibility of paving 2.35 miles of road in the subdivision with money from revenue sharing.

Most of questions were aimed at James Travirca, supervisor for that area, however Page noted he was addressing all the supervisors for the record.

Page, reading from a prepared statement, noted the roads suggested for paving serve more than 160 homes and camps.

Of that 2.35 miles requested to be paved, 1.65 miles of road are currently gravel, Page said.

The remaining .7 miles would involve repaving of Chapman Road, the main arterial roadway in the subdivision.

Page noted the 1.65 miles of road way serves 55 houses per mile. He compared that figure to some 2.2 miles of roadway paved last year in Shoreline Park which averaged only 40 houses per mile.

He implied the supervisors should give the Garden Isle Subdivision paving project priority.

Travirca made not promises and stated he would consider the subdivision's request. He noted citizens on Central Avenue are also asking that road be repaved.

The revenue sharing budget will be included in the proposed fiscal year budget when the supervisors meet Aug. 2, in another public meeting to discuss the 1982-83 fiscal budget.

The final budget must be approved by Aug. 15.

Shuttle mission five slated Nov. 11

The flight of the first operational Space Shuttle mission, STS-5, is currently scheduled for launch from the Kennedy Space Center, Fla., on Nov. 11.

The fifth flight of Columbia will carry a crew of four including Vance Brand, commander; Robert Overmyer, pilot; and Joseph Allen and William Lenoir, mission specialists.

Two commercial satellites will be deployed during the planned five day mission. They are the Satellite Business System SBS-C, a commercial communication satellite, and Telesat-E, a domestic Canadian communication satellite.

Shuttle program officials evaluated an option of advancing the launch date of the first operational mission and concluded that while such an advancement is possible from the capability standpoint, there are other overriding advantages for maintaining the previously planned launch date of Nov. 11, Veterans Day.

Nine served indictments

By BRENT MACEY

Of the 74 indictments handed down by the July term of the Hancock County Grand Jury, nine were served this week by the Hancock County Sheriff's Department.

Neil Hampton, 18, of 506 Demouthin Avenue, indicted for burglary of a dwelling, was in jail Friday.

Paul D. Massey, 21, of Route One Box 120 has been released on $1,000 bond on charges of grand larceny.

Ramond Allerman Jr. of 1007 Longo Street in Waveland was released on $20,000 bond for 18 counts of forgery.

JoEllen Champagne, 48, of P.O. Box 263, Yarbrough Street in Shoreline Park was released on $5,500 bond after being indicted on seven counts of food stamp fraud.

Loren Wesley Nicaise Jr. 23, of Route 3 Box 874 Bay St. Louis was released on $3,000 bond on charges of grand larceny.

John Edward Nicaise, 18, of Kiln has been released on $3,000 property bond on charges of two counts of grand larceny.

Jeff Wayne Carver, 22, of General Delivery Pearlinton, was indicted on charges of aggravated assault.

Randy E. Koenig, 23, has been charged with possession of a controlled substance, manufacturing, growing and cultivating marijuana.

Lester Cline, 22, of P.O. Box 663 Bay St. Louis has been charged with burglary of a dwelling.

Insulation costs on Shuttle's external tank under scrutiny

Engineers in the Spray-On Foam Insulation (SOFI) facility at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center, Huntsville, Ala., are presently looking for ways to reduce the cost of the thermal protection system for the Space Shuttle's External Tank.

The External Tank is managed by the Shuttle Projects Office at the Marshall Center.

The SOFI facility is designed to give the Marshall Center the capability to evaluate foam materials for use as part of the External Tank thermal protection system.

"There are a lot of improvements that can be made to the Spray-On Foam Insulation (SOFI) utilized in the tanks' thermal protection system," said Paul Shuerer, chief of the Process Engineering Division in the Marshall Center's Materials and Processes Laboratory. This laboratory is responsible for operation of the facility and the testing and evaluation of materials utilized on the External Tank.

"The External Tank Project in Marshall's Shuttle Projects Office is continually seeking ways to reduce the cost of the External Tank and have been extremely supportive of our efforts," said Shuerer. "As the disposable element of the Space Shuttle, any reduction in cost that can be found amounts to substantial overall program savings."

"In the SOFI facility we are able to control the many factors that effect the foam's application and performance. SOFI requires strict control of a variety of factors, including the humidity and the temperature of the facility as well as the temperature of the foam and the structure to which it is being applied."

"That is where our facility plays an important role. We are able to determine the parameters—the top and bottom limits—that comprise acceptable spraying conditions."

Actual application in the facility is accomplished by a robot that is computer synchronized with a precision turntable. "This automated system allows us to control the test operations and to precisely simulate the actual conditions that will exist in the production spray cells at Michoud including the speed with which the foam is applied, and the amount of overlap time between passes. These are critical factors affecting the quality and performance of the applied foam," said Shuerer.

"Presently, we are testing a foam that could replace the combination of thermal protection materials used on the aft dome of the External Tank." The aft dome, presently utilizes a composite thermal protection system, consisting of a Super-Light Ablator (SLA) and Spray-On Foam Insulation. It must withstand the radiant heat from the Shuttle engines and Solid Rocket Motors, and protect the aluminum in the aft dome.

"The foam we are working on is a higher performance material than the present foam, and we and Martin Marietta Corporation believe it will allow us to eliminate the SLA from the aft dome," said Shuerer. Martin Marietta Corporation manufactures the External Tank at Marshall's Michoud Assembly Facility.

The elimination of the SLA from the aft dome will result in the accomplishment of two primary objectives. First, the cost will be reduced substantially. SLA costs approximately $50 per pound, while the spray foam costs approximately $3 per pound.

Additionally, the foam weighs substantially less, and will allow additional payload weight since the External Tank is carried almost all the way into orbit.

"This is only the beginning of the work we are now able to accomplish in reducing the cost of the External Tank," said Shuerer. "A variety of other ideas is being discussed and studied, including eliminating the SLA in other areas, precision molding of insulation that is applied to components, lower cost welding techniques and high speed machining."

Nuptial Mass unites Ulmer, Dickinson

Our Lady of the Gulf Catholic Church formed the setting for the July 10 marriage of Ann Amanda Dickinson and Melvin George Ulmer III.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bayne Dickinson of Bay St. Louis. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Melvin George Ulmer Jr., also of Bay St. Louis.

Rev. Henry McInerney officiated at the 3:30 p.m. double ring ceremony and celebrated a Nuptial Mass before an altar decorated with arrangements of white gladioli, pink and white carnations, baby's breath and greenery.

Standing baskets of identical flowers adorned the sanctuary, with palm and fern greenery completing the decorations. White satin bows and English ivy marked the pews on the center aisle.

Musical selections were provided by Mary Beth Gex and Dennis Arnold accompanied by Mrs. John McKenna, organist.

Scripture readings were rendered by Sidney Level, cousin of the groom.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown, a white gladioli, pink and white carnations, baby's breath and greenery.

bodice had a portrait neckline of scalloped lace and short, shirred sleeves. The billowing skirt of tulle featured insertions of wide bands of lace dipping to the hemline in front and into the sweeping cathedral train. Her fingertip veil of imported illusion was attached to a small lace caplet. She wore an antique gold and pearl necklace belonging to the mother; and carried a cascade bouquet of white sweetheart roses, baby's breath and English ivy.

Joan Dickinson of Bay St. Louis attended her sister as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Tricia Dickinson of Bay St. Louis, sister of the bride; Mrs. Beverly Dickinson of New Orleans, sister-in-law of the bride; Laurie Gex of Waveland, cousin of the bride; and Laura Vosen of Loun, Miss.

The attendants were identically attired in pale pink and white dotted gowns fashioned with full ruffled collars over fitted bodices and sashed waistlines giving way to full bouffant skirts. They wore short white mesh gloves and carried white wicker baskets of pink and white miniature carnations, baby's breath and English ivy.

Melvin G. Ulmer Jr. served his son as best man.

Groomsmen were Charles B. Dickinson Jr. of New Orleans, brother of the bride; Fred Ulmer of Bay St. Louis, brother of the groom; Mike Gibbons of Bay St. Louis and Charles Nickles of Jackson.

Ushers were Eric Schott and Carl Schott of Bay St. Louis.

The mother of the bride chose for the occasion a street length dress of pink crepe, featuring a petal skirt with satin belted waistline. The petal motif was repeated in the satin piped short sleeves. Matching accessories and an orchid corsage completed her ensemble.

The groom's mother was attired in a pale yellow sheer crepe dress, fashioned with a

V-neckline, three-quarter length sleeves and a slim skirt overlaid with chiffon. The self-belt closed with a flat bow in the front. She wore matching accessories and an orchid corsage.

A reception followed the ceremony at the North Beach home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Lucien Gex, Sr. of Bay St. Louis.

Arrangements of white gladioli, pink and white carnations and baby's breath decorated throughout the home. The bride's table was covered with an heirloom embroidered linen cloth and held a five tiered wedding cake topped and encircled with fresh flowers.

Beverly Hill of Bay St. Louis kept the guest register.

For traveling to the Bahamas, the bride chose a pink linen suit with a white blouse.

The couple will reside in Hattiesburg.

Nameth, Ladner plan August wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Carl E. Nameth of Bay St. Louis announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth Sue Nameth, to Richard Joseph Ladner, Jr., son of Mrs. Kathleen Ladner of Bay St. Louis and Richard Ladner Sr. of New Orleans.

The bride-elect attended Bernal High School in San Jose, Calif. She is the recipient of several awards in art in many states.

The prospective groom is a graduate of Bay Senior High School and Phillips College in Gulfport. He received superior medals and awards in music while in school.

The couple will exchange vows in an 11 a.m. ceremony August 21 in Main Street United Methodist Church in Bay St. Louis. A reception will follow at the home of the bride's parents, 131 Carroll Ave., Bay St. Louis.

Parties fete Dickinson

A series of parties and showers honored Ann Amanda Dickinson prior to her July 10 marriage of Melvin George Ulmer III.

A poolside cocktail party was hosted June 4 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Haas of Bay St. Louis. Hosts were Mrs. Frank Schmidt and Mrs. Haas.

The Waveland home of Mrs. Lucien Gex was the setting for a "Western" party hosted by Mrs. Gerald Gex and Mrs. Lucien Gex on June 12.

A miscellaneous coffee-shower was given June 26 by Mrs. Lenny Rupp and Mrs. C.C. McDonald Jr. in the Rupp's Waveland home.

On July 1 a kitchen-pantry shower was hosted in the home of Mrs. John Hill of Bay St. Louis. Hostesses were Mrs. Horace Kergosien, Mrs. Phil Kergosien and Mrs. Hill. A bridal luncheon was held in the home of Mrs. Omer DeBever, with hosts being Mrs. Guy Billups and Mrs. DeBever.

Invitational arts, crafts festival slated in Gulfport

The Harbor Square Development Corporation will sponsor the first annual Harbor Square Invitational Fine Arts and Crafts Festival Sept. 11-12 in Downtown Gulfport. Exhibitors from along the Gulf Coast and around the region will be invited to participate in the festival by the festival's standards committee who will review slides of the applicants' works.

The slides, which must accompany all applications, will assist the committee in selecting exhibitors which will create a high-quality, well-balanced exposition.

Judging will take place the morning of Sept. 11, with cash awards of $100 for first place, $50 for second place, and awards of distinction given in each of the following categories: oil and acrylic, watercolor, mixed media, graphics/drawings/pen and ink, sculpture, pottery, and creative crafts.

Purchase awards are currently being solicited.

The exhibition fee is $35 for a 12' x 8' space for the two day event. No commissions will be charged.

Exhibitors will be notified within ten days of submitting their application and slides of their acceptance in the festival. Applications will be accepted until August 10, 1982.

The first annual event is being sponsored by Harbor Square Development Corporation. HSDC hopes the festival will build each year to be known as one of the most outstanding outdoor shows in the South.

Interested exhibitors may receive applications by writing to Nancy White, P.O. Box 1284, Gulfport, MS 39501 or by calling the Harbor Square Development Corporation office at 601-864-5657.

Fannin, Burke wed in St. Paul's

Abbe Colleen Burke and Virgil Jon Sweeney Fannin exchanged vows in an afternoon ceremony June 19 in St. Paul's Catholic Church in Pass Christian with Rev. John Scanlon officiating.

Nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Patricia Allen accompanied by Mrs. Ruth Thurman.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James O. Burke Jr. of Delisle. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Fannin of Pass Christian. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white chantilly lace over a tulle taffeta, fashioned with a bouffant skirt and attached chapel train. The Queen Anne neckline was adorned with appliques of chantilly lace and seed pearls. A matching Camelot headpiece of lace held a veil of bridal illusion trimmed in lace. She carried a bouquet of pastel spring flowers and pink lilies interspersed with baby's breath.

Mrs. Sandra Weeks attended her sister as matron of honor.

Bridesmaids were Almee Weeks and Michelle Weeks, nieces of the bride. Flower girl was Mary Beth Weeks, niece of the bride.

Jonathan Williams served the groom as best man.

Groomsmen were Mark Pleunski and Mark Poulson.

On return from a wedding trip to Canada, the couple will reside in Pass Christian.

Means named GCBA Life Master

It is estimated there are about 12 million people in the US who play the card game called bridge. About 300,000 of these play a special type of bridge called duplicate, according to American Contract Bridge League.

Approximately 300 of these players are members of Unit 180, the Gulf Coast Bridge Association. Recently, one of the local players, Mrs. Mildred Means of Waveland achieved the prestigious level of Life Master and was honored with a champagne party at the clubhouse.

Mildred Means, known as Sis to her many friends, has been playing duplicate bridge for about 12 years. Since moving to Waveland from New Orleans sixteen years ago, her face is familiar to many Hancock residents as librarian at the Waveland Branch. She is also organist at St. Clare Church and is active in many civic activities.

Her name will be engraved on the Life Master Trophy as the 59th of the local unit to achieve this status. The first name on the trophy is Mr. Jason Floyd of Gulfport in 1952.

Unit 180 comprises the counties of Harrison, Hancock, Jackson, Stone, George, Pearl River and Green. There are 14 regular open games scheduled every day of the week from Most Point to Piquette, but most meet at the Gulfport clubhouse.

Some of these games are limited to only novice players as a continuing effort to attract new players to the game. Special social events such as pot-luck suppers and champagne parties are also scheduled and the unit hosts Sectional Tournaments twice a year, the next being August 5-8 in Biloxi.

Classes for beginners or intermediates are offered by the unit several times throughout the year.

Mrs. Genne Winter Despain of Biloxi is not only one of the leading players of the South, but also one of the most respected teachers who seems to get as much thrill when winning herself as when one of her former students scores a big win. Genne was recently selected as first alternate to play in the World Ladies Pairs in France.

Lamar Jordan of Long Beach, current president, says "We invite everyone... those who have never played, those who may have played years ago, those who play party bridge and especially newcomers to the area to come visit, come play or call and arrange to join our next class."

The local club also participates in nationwide charity events. Mr. and Mrs. Walt Schlessman of Diamondhead recently donated $750 in their name by the ACBL Charity Foundation to the Kidney Foundation as a result of their top score in a Charity Game.

DIAMONDHEAD GARDEN—Tree-shaded gardens containing a variety of colorful shrubs accent the contemporary home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Palermo Jr. at 846 Kaleki Court in Diamondhead. The residence was selected by the Diamond-head Garden Club as that community's July Garden of the Month. A sun deck on one side of the home adorned with hanging baskets was also noted by the garden club as an outstanding element of the yard. (Staff photo by Wayne Ducomb Jr.)

Gulf Coast Symphony Orchestra to celebrate 20th

The Gulf Coast Symphony Orchestra celebrating its 20th anniversary season this year, has released its concert schedule for 1982-83, as well as plans to bring its music to more people on the Coast.

The season will open on Saturday evening, September 25 and will feature oboe orchestra soloists William Hopper and Linda Sparks performing the "Concerto for Two Oboes and Orchestra," by Albinoni.

Included in the evenings program will be a performance of Hindemith's Symphony, "Mastias der Moler," (Mathias the Painter), by the orchestra.

Four programs are scheduled for the 20th season.

The Dec. 4 concert will feature Christmas music with the Perkinson Choir, under the direction of Eugen Clement.

Mozart's "Symphony Concerto" will top off that evening's performance.

Lester Senter of Mississippi operatic mezzo soprano, returns Feb. 4.

Mohler's Fourth Symphony will be the featured musical selection of the evening. Following the intermission Miss Senter will perform several lighter more popular songs.

On April 9 the full Gulf Coast Symphony Orchestra will present its third annual "Pops Concert," entitled, "Music on the Sound."

The "Pops" is a concert featuring popular music with separate table seating. This year the Pops will also be a gala celebration of the 20th anniversary of the symphony.

In November, 1963 the Gulf Coast Symphony Orchestra was formed by a number of interested community leaders under the leadership of Dr. J.A. Graves.

The first rehearsal was held with a group of 35 musicians, four being professional players.

Conductor was James Shannon, who has served as orchestra director since that time.

Two concerts were played that season, one in Biloxi, one in Gulfport.

By the following year, there were more than 50 players, and a major concertmaster had been employed, Howard Weiss, presently concertmaster of the Rochester

Philharmonic Orchestra and assistant director.

Each year more professional players were added to the roster. The orchestra also acted as a training ground for the young players. About 50 youth concerts have been presented over the past 19 seasons.

The Gulf Coast Symphony is now one of the oldest and largest in the State.

This year, the Symphony Guild in conjunction with the Symphony Board, is sponsoring a membership drive as well as broadening their public information program in order to bring this art form to a record number of people on the Gulf Coast.

The Symphony Guild will be calling and contacting people and encouraging them to become members of and to support the symphony.

The Symphony Guild sponsors many projects for the support and benefit of the orchestra, and is actively sponsoring the membership drive. Mrs. O.Z. Culler, vice president of the board of directors of the symphony and chairperson of the membership committee, stated, "We appreciate the fact that the guild is taking such an active part by telephoning people for the drive; we just couldn't do without the Symphony Guild."

Miss Clara Nassar is president of the Symphony Guild. All performances are scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. in the Biloxi High School Auditorium.

Location of the "Pops Concert" will be announced later. Twentieth anniversary season tickets are available from The Gulf Coast Symphony Orchestra, Inc., P.O. Box 4303, Biloxi, MS 39531.

Season tickets for all four special concerts are being offered at a much lower price than single admissions in order to make the symphony more affordable, and to encourage Gulf Coast residents to attend more concerts.

Categories of memberships include patron, $50; century, $100 (includes 2 tickets); benefactor, $150 (includes 2 tickets); student, $12; adult, $24.

For further information contact Miss Clara Nassar, 388-2707, 321 Edgewater Drive, Biloxi, MS 39531.

Nutrition educator urges trial use of generic brands

Generic products at the grocery store may not be the choice of every food buyer, but a Mississippi nutrition educator says they are worth trying and comparing with brands usually bought.

Generic products are called "no-name," or "non-brand," depending on the store, and usually cost less than national or store brands.

"It's up to the consumer to decide whether a product is a good buy," says Nelda Starks, a nutrition education specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

Mrs. Starks lists at least three considerations for the food buyer to weigh before choosing a generic product. They are:

—Is the product cheaper than another brand?

—Sometimes national brands can be on sale at a better price," Mrs. Starks says.

—Is the generic product the size container you can best use?

—Will the generic product meet your needs?

Mrs. Starks suggests that people might want to try generic products during these times of continuing food price inflation. She says the products are packaged in cans, jars, boxes and plastic wrapping.

"The labels are usually black and white with bold lettering stating only the basic name of the product," Mrs. Starks says. "Packages have no pouring spouts, protective coating or pull tabs. There are no special imprints, photography, back labels or designs."

Mrs. Starks says selections are limited to one size of each generic product. The amount of sugar used in syrups in canned fruits is reduced. Fragrance and color in paper products are eliminated.

"All these things help reduce the cost of these items," Mrs. Starks says.

The nutrition educator says the standard minimum specification for the quality of generic food items is U.S. Department of Agriculture Grade C with some Grade B to fill in where needed.

"Grade B and C foods are just as safe, nutritious and wholesome and are packed under the same sanitary conditions as Grade A foods," Mrs. Starks says.

"Grade C products may have less uniform size, color, texture and maturity. However, this does not affect the nutritive food value."

Telephone Pioneers elect Melda Stuart

The Telephone Pioneers of America elected Melda Stuart of Gulfport president of the Gulf Coast Council, Telephone Pioneers of America at a recent annual meeting at the Hilton in Biloxi.

Stuart has been associated with South Central Bell Telephone Company for 25 years and is now supervisor-assignment in Biloxi.

She succeeds Bryan Thompson of Biloxi and will head the 400-member volunteer organization on the Coast until June 30, 1983.

Among the Pioneer's many community service projects are the building of mini-parks in most Coast communities; its Future Pioneer, Clown Troupe; its work with the deaf, elderly and blind by Life Members and Pioneer Partners; and its current statewide project to build a cafeteria at the Palmer Home for Children in Columbus.

The Gulf Sands Club for Life Members here on the Coast has been active over the years with building, special electronic training aids for retardation, schools, maintaining and repairing "talking books" for the blind and other worthwhile community services.

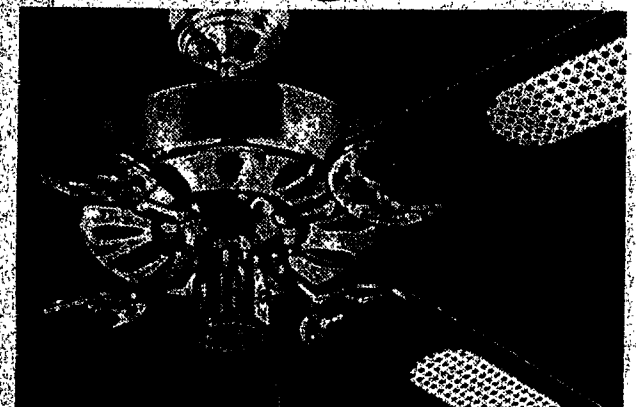

The Pioneers have recently published "Bell's Best," a cookbook with favorite Southern style recipes submitted by South Central Bell employees which has been extremely popular on the Coast and throughout the state.

The Gulf Coast Council is a unit of the Telephone Pioneers of America, composed of persons with 18 or more years service in the industry.

HURRICANES ...a Gulf Coast Menace

This is hurricane season... a period of deadly threat for the Gulf Coast. Do you know the difference between a hurricane watch and a hurricane warning? ## Ag Affairs

By ED BLAKE
FARMERS MADE SAM BLUSH

A handful of American farmers have brought a blush from Uncle Sam.

We wish it had happened in Mississippi, but it didn't. Yet it might have if our bridge had washed out instead of theirs. It involved a small group of red-blooded American farmers whose reliance on federal bureaucracy just isn't well—well, like it too often is.

These guys were not trying to reddens Uncle Sam's face. Uncle Sam just sort of got in their way and it happened—last fall. But the incident in Wyoming might well clear the air throughout these United States that private enterprise and initiative still are around when and if they are not stifled out by an overly officious big federal government.

The story begins in a farming community 45 miles north of Yuma, Arizona, in the 1950's. About ten farmers there needed a bridge across the Colorado River where it curves through the Cibola Valley, cutting off a good farming region from a practical access route to local markets for the vegetables they produce in the valley.

From the beginning the bridge idea was rejected by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and others who thought it just couldn't be built.

Wayne Sprawls, a local farmer and president of the Cibola Irrigation District, thought it could and solicited funds, local credit, and the backing necessary for them to build the bridge themselves, utilizing personal resources without government help.

In 1957 the bridge was completed over the stream and produce flowed to market even as the Corps of Engineers protested and went to court to have the structure removed. Only following intervention by U.S. Senator Barry Goldwater did Uncle Sam sign a permit legalizing the already constructed bridge that was in service at a cost of only $50,000 compared to the federal price tag estimated at over $1 million.

For 19 years the farmers and others used the bridge without a hitch. But in September, 1976, a storm dumped 11 inches of rain in a three hour period in the valley which killed two people and destroyed bridges and railroad tracks throughout the area, including the farmers' bridge.

Again farmers found themselves taking a long 45 minute trip to Blythe to market their produce.

Farmer Sprawls flew into action again with credit backing from the Bank of America in Blythe. Assessments were proposed at the rate of $10 per acre on the 3,400 acres of farmland in the valley with the promise that it would pay for itself in less than seven years.

Farmers brought out their equipment and worked on the new bridge project for eight months. On October 17, 1981, a gleaming new 400 foot span, with steel pilings and concrete decking, was dedicated. This time the bridge cost them $280,000—a bargain they felt when compared to the $15 million it would have cost the federal government.

"And we'll have the bridge paid off in 1988," declared Sprawls.

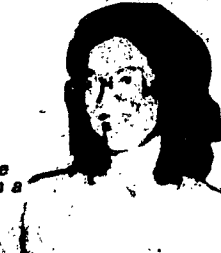

This dogged independence from the federal government was noted by President Reagan who wired them his congratulations and cited their efforts as "reflecting the very best in the American tradition of ingenuity and determination."

Today the farmers of Cibola Valley again are enjoying a much faster route to the marketplace, and are able to sell their more profitable vegetable crops as opposed to lower cash yielding cotton. More importantly though, they proved that even today—despite an opposite current in the nation—no man need be an island when he and his neighbors roll up their sleeves and build whatever bridge that's needed.

THE ABUNDANT LIFE

I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly — John 10:10

By Shawn Murphy
MINISTER, BAY ST. LOUIS CHURCH OF CHRIST

In this hurry-up, get it done yesterday world, conflict and tension are daily companions for most of us.

Hiring, firing, deadlines, family budget-cutting, fussy children, higher interest rates and taxes, the soaring cost of living are but a few of the daily events we must face on life's obstacle course.

There are various ways in which people meet the tensions of which we wrote. For most of us, the manner in which we handle these conflicts was programmed into us as small children as we watched how mom and dad faced the everyday struggles of their lives.

Some people are escapist by nature. They avoid problems and conflict by simply not facing them. This is often symptomized by regular drinking of alcoholic beverages which will more than likely lead to alcoholism.

Escapism may be seen often in younger ages through drug abuse, day-dreaming and fantasizing.

Not being able to deal with the many conflicts of life is also a major cause of run-aways and suicides as well.

As if unhappiness and unproductivity were not enough this incapacitating disease called "tension" is also extremely contagious.

If a spouse comes home from work extremely tense than you can expect a very quick chain reaction of events to take place.

The husband growls at the wife, the wife snaps at the child and the child kicks the dog, and everyone loses.

It is easy to see that tension is a primary barrier, not unlike the Great Wall of China, in seeking to enjoy the abundant blessings that God has and is giving us.

Here are a few suggestions that I have gathered from personal experiences and other sources as well. Perhaps they may be of benefit to you.

1. Learn to plan your day, or your week, so that you have a workable plan. Being organized is one of the best ways to combat "tension" producing situations.

2. Learn to do one thing at a time and finish what you begin. No one functions at their very best with ten things on their mind.

3. Do not take yourself too seriously. Learn to chuckle at the many things that we let get us so upset.

Be your own analyst and ask yourself why does this upset me so much? Does my being tense-help the situation any?

4. Learn the art of relaxing. Find ways of relaxing that are not dependant on artificial stimuli such as alcohol or valium. Take a stroll along the beach. Turn the T.V. off and settle down with a good book!

5. Learn to love what you do. If you can't find satisfaction in what you now are doing, explore other possibilities. Remember the more you put into your work the more you'll find satisfaction in it.

6. Learn as much as possible to always stay ahead of yourself in your work schedule and financial dealings.

This eases the various job-related pressures as well as bill-paying tensions that are such a common phenomenon in our everyday routine.

7. Learn to live in the presence of God.

It is sad to see so many people carrying on with their lives and work as though they were Atlas, carrying the whole world on their shoulders.

It is useless to live this way. "What a friend we have in Jesus, all our sins and griefs to bear," but only if we let Him!

There's An Answer

go and let God.

A. It's good to continue to pray about that problem, but change the form of your prayer. Having turned it over to God, now thank Him daily that He is working it out in the right way. And hold in your mind a picture of a good outcome.

Southern Baptist president to speak at Gulfshore Assembly

The newly elected president of the Southern Baptist Convention, Jimmy Draper, will be a featured speaker during two of four Sunday School Conferences at Gulfshore Baptist Assembly on Henderson Point, Aug. 2-7.

Draper, pastor of First Baptist Church, Euless, Tex., will lead Bible studies at 7 p.m. each evening, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday.

The other major speaker for Sunday School Conferences to be held at Gulfshore July 28-31, will be Earl Craig, pastor of First Baptist Church, Jackson, Miss.

The Stalneckers, a singing family based in Jacksonville, Fla., will sing during all the conferences and will present a mini-concert of sacred music at the 7 p.m. services on Tuesday and Friday evenings of the dates above.

These conferences are training events sponsored by the Sunday School Department of the Mississippi Baptist Convention Board.

The public is invited. There is no charge.

Parish News

The parish council elected Larry Cain to fill the unexpired term of Charles Joseph III as adult youth advisor.

Joseph did a tremendous job on the council with our youth.

We're sorry to have him leave our community.

Sharon Alexander was elected to fill the unexpired term of Rose Raboteau as secretary whose work schedule prevents her from remaining on council. Thanks, Rose, for your service. Geraldine Lang was elected to represent school board members on the council.

Ophelia Raboteau was appointed chairperson of the fund raising committee for construction of a church ramp for the handicapped; Larry Cain, chairperson of labor and material committee.

St. Rose Cafeteria Committee has been approved by parish council to inspect cleanups after functions by individuals or groups and to impose a fine if cleanup is not done properly.

This committee was formed as a result of the cleanup project over the last two weeks.

Plans were discussed at the Altar Society's last meeting for its annual Mass on Sept. 12 at 9 a.m. New badge medals will be purchased which members may pick up at rectory in about four weeks. For further information, please call Marie Mercadel, 467-9967.

Gospel Choir will practice on Tuesday at 6:30 p.m.

St. Rose Alumni will meet in the cafeteria on Wednesday at 7 p.m.

The Dominican Sisters of Hancock County will meet in the cafeteria on Thursday at 7 p.m.

Next Saturday, July 31, at 4 p.m. Cedric Hazeur will make a lifelong commitment in marriage to Charlene Haynes at St. Rose during a Nuptial Mass. A reception will follow at the DAV Hall.

The second collection today will be for the renovation program at Bay Catholic School.

The mini-fair for Bay Catholic School last Sunday was a success, thanks to the many people involved in it. Bell system and public address system for the school will be purchased with fair proceeds.

Our Lady's Academy is looking good. Wonderful people continue to volunteer and our goals are basking in a positive environment. Enrollment continues to grow, from 114 to 156. We will probably have to close enrollment at 160 this year.

Bay Catholic Elementary is well on the road to a new school year with brightly painted classrooms and desks. Many parents are spending long hours in clean-up and paint-up. Enrollment is now at 253. Registration is still open for double sections in grades 3, 4, 5, and 6.

A booster club is being initiated for elementary school. Parents are needed to coach and support this program. Plan now to be active.

Parishioners are asked to help the American Cancer Society in a huge research program. Volunteers are needed to distribute questionnaires.

At least 300 researchers are needed for the Gulf Coast area. This volunteer effort will not take more than three days' work.

Target research is being done on the Black population over 45. Deadline for recruiting researchers is Thursday, July 29.

Call Angela Maffei, 374-8316; Barbara Watters, 374-0224; or Cheryl Lowell, 863-2233.

NSTL's Visitors Center is open to the public each Monday through Friday except holidays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Cooking up a storm

By Katy McGuire Caire

The potato is often called the Frenchman's favorite vegetable, just as we are partial to our grains. But the potato was considered dangerous to eat, and fit only for use as an ornamental plant in France until as late as the 18th century.

At that time a Mr. Parmentier, a Parisian chemist who had subsisted largely on a diet of potatoes while in a German prison camp for several years, realized that the potato might be the answer to France's famine problems, when crop failures destroyed the grain for bread.

He had to go about his plans sneakily, because of the people's attitude toward the potato...so he brought a number of potato plants to the French court, first as a decorative vine for gardens and tables, then grew them in his garden, posting guards around the potato patch during the daytime, but leaving it unguarded at night.

Of course, just as the wily chemist had planned, people began stealing what they had decided must be quite a rare delicacy...and the potato became so popular that a bouquet of potato flowers was presented to King Louis XIV, and Frenchmen grew to enjoy the "pommes de terre"...apples of the earth.

Parmentier's happy countrymen paid him tribute for his experiments in cooking the potato by calling this potato-based dish

POMMES DE TERRE

PARMENTIER
6 to 8 medium potatoes
4 Tbsp. butter
Pepper, salt to taste
2 Tbsp. fresh minced parsley
Peel the potatoes, dice and parboil for three or four minutes. Drain. Heat the butter in a heavy skillet atop the stove, or in a hot oven (400 to 425) until golden brown, stirring from time to time with a spatula, taking care not to mash the potatoes. Season with pepper, and salt if you wish, and sprinkle with minced parsley.

This goes well with just about any meal, from the breakfast omelette to the late-night snack, and though simply made, is a delicious dish. (Four to 6 servings.)

Another easy potato dish, and almost a meal by itself, is POMMES DE TERRE AU LARD

(In the French cuisine "au lard" means with bacon.) For this, fry four or five slices of bacon quite crisp, then remove the slices and crumble them, discarding the bacon fat in the skillet.

Melt four tablespoons of butter in the skillet, and fry a large sliced onion until soft. Peel four or five rather large potatoes, and cut in 1/4 inch slices.

Add to the skillet along with the crumbled bacon.

Add a cup of bouillon or beef stock, or use a bouillon cube. (I freeze beef and chicken stock in ice cube trays, then store in a bag in the freezer, taking out what I need as the occasion arises.)

Cover the pan and simmer until the potatoes are tender, turning them over gently from time to time. If necessary, add a little water so they won't burn...and when they are done, you'll have little or no liquid to drain off, just a tasty coating on the "spuds." (Four servings.)

RUMPOLE RETURNS—Lee McKern as "Rumpole of the Bailey" returns for an encore telecast on "Mystery" at 9 p.m., Tuesdays, beginning Aug. 3, on the Mississippi ETV Network. In the first episode, Rumpole is faced with the responsibility of defending an absentminded vicar on a shoplifting charge.

Unemployment insurance trust fund sound

While the unemployment insurance trust funds in 16 states are reporting deficits of up to $1.5 billion to the federal government, Mississippi's unemployment insurance trust fund remains in good financial condition in spite of record levels of unemployment, according to Mississippi Employment Security Commission Executive Director O. H. Simmons.

Liston L. Thomasson, the director of the MESC Unemployment Compensation Division, says that the trust fund, from which jobless benefits are paid, contained almost $256.2 million as of July 1, 1982.

The MESC paid out almost $11,624,000 under the regular unemployment insurance program in June 1982, when the state's unemployment rate stood at 11.6 percent.

Thomasson says he does not foresee the possibility of Mississippi's trust fund dropping dangerously low, even with the continuing recession.

Simmons credits the Mississippi legislature with ensuring the solvency of the state's unemployment insurance trust fund. He says state lawmakers have kept benefits reasonable while maintaining an equitable employer tax system designed to keep the trust fund financially stable.

Patty Lewis, Pascagoula; Kim Dill, Pass Christian; and Donna Flowers, Moss Point. The event is sponsored annually by the Division of Tourism, State Department of Economic Development.

Brown & Root project employment to peak at estimated 2,800

Brown & Root, Inc., recently began work on a new job in Mississippi—the pulp mill for Leaf River Forest Products, Inc., a partnership of Great Northern Nekoosa Corporation and Kymi Kymmene Oy of Finland.

Brown & Root, a Halliburton company, is one of the world's largest engineering and construction firms.

Brown & Root was awarded the $522-million design and construction contract in December.

The company has begun site preparation. Project spokesman Glenn Bodien said,

"Site preparation will be a major job since there are two different grades, requiring filling and moving about 3.5 million yards of dirt. This portion of the job will take six to seven months to complete."

Brown & Root has worked on jobs in Mississippi since 1973 with a good many former employees living in the state, and in the Hattiesburg area, whom we hope will join us on the Leaf River pulp mill project," Bodien said.

He added, "There's a good labor pool ready to go to work. At one of our other jobs near Pascagoula, there are 35,000 coal fired, steam electric generating station. Eighteen months ago, Brown & Root began work on a $1 billion major refinery expansion project for Chevron at Pascagoula. Last month workers on that project posted a safety record of 4 million man hours without a lost time accident.

On that project, reflecting Brown & Root's commitment to hire skilled and unskilled workers locally, 4,510 people have been employed and 82 percent live within 50 miles of the project. More than 1,100 employees have been residents of Jackson County since their high school years.

Spin-off for the state from Brown & Root's Pascagoula job includes over $4 million paid to the state in sales tax from equipment and material purchased for the Chevron job.

Other major jobs included engineering and project management on the renovation of a fiber plant for U.S. Gypsum at Greenville, oil field services projects based in Collins, and a number of plant maintenance contracts.

Jobs Brown & Root has been on in Mississippi since 1973 include several power plants, such as the recently completed Plant Daniel near Escatawpa and the DeSoto

HONORED ON RETIREMENT—Lillian Dillard Bulce, right, was recently honored with a luncheon sponsored by the Department of Economic Development. Frances McKay, coordinator of the Mississippi Welcome Centers, is shown presenting her with a plaque to show appreciation for her outstanding contribution to the travel industry. Mrs. Bulce recently resigned as manager of the Hancock County Welcome Center at 1-10 and Hwy. 807 in Hancock County.

Oil and gas show set in December

Mississippi will now have its own oil and gas show with the development of the Old South Oil & Gas Expo scheduled for Dec. 8-11, at the Mississippi Trade Mart in Jackson.

The three-day show will be directed to all members of the oil and gas industry in this state and parts of Alabama.

Ann Britt and Associates of Shreveport is the management firm for the show and is now accepting applications for exhibit space.

Exhibitors will feature all phases of oil and gas equipment, services and supplies, as well as many auxiliary companies that service the industry, such as computer, banking, and insurance. Everyone whose livelihood is affected by oil and gas production will be invited to attend.

In addition, show management will provide an educational program in conjunction with the expo as a source of continuing education for members of Mississippi's oil and gas industry.

The development of the Old South expo will make for the first time attendance at a major oil show possible for many people in Mississippi. Early indications are that the show will be a major trade show event for the state.

Additional details can be obtained by telephoning 318-669-3236 or writing to 3010 Knight Street, Suite 250, Slidell, La. 70458.

Country meets jazz on "Ain't City Limits" when "Mandolin Special" is presented at 8 p.m. Saturday, July 31, on the Mississippi ERT network.

The concert spotlights the evolution of mandolin styles through two pioneering generations: the David Grisman Quintet reflects the influence of youth on the traditions of traditional mandolinists; John Biles and John Burns and Johnny Canale. The program will be broadcast at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 3.
